At the Dardanelles the British are showing renewed activity. They are hammering the Turks with artillery supported by such ships of the allied fleet as are not engaged against Bulgaria.

In the Champagne

The capture of Tahrir hill by the Germans sums up for the present the known result of the sudden spirit of heavy fighting in the Champagne. While the contenders on the western front have not renewed the general offensive, it is likely that there will be frequent clashes over considerable stretches of the front while the Balkan situation is so acute as each side desires to prevent the other from transferring troops to the other east.

CHINA WILL DO HER OWN WILL

Celestial Republic Rejects Proposal That Change of Government Be Deferred

PEKING, Nov. 1.—The Chinese government Monday rejected the proposals of Japan, Great Britain and Russia for postponement of the decision whether a monarchical form of government is to be re-established. The decision of the Chinese government was made known by Tiao Yulin, vice minister of foreign affairs. Tiao Yulin thanked the powers for their friendly interest in the welfare of China. He said the decision concerning a change in the form of government was wholly in the hands of the people and that therefore it would be impossible to adopt the suggestion for a postponement.

"TAN-YER WILL" "FOOT HILL"

Then was begun the effort to have the state pay for the printing of the Brownie (Hayes Thomas) and for all the salaries, rents and expenses incurred after the time fixed for the completion of the work. It should be understood that if the work had been done as originally designed, and within the limit fixed by the legislature, the money appropriated at the time would have been sufficient to pay the cost of the code. The legislature in 1911, in order to allay all feeling in the matter on the part of the gentlemen who composed the commission, passed a bill appropriating the money claimed. This bill, however, was promptly vetoed. The matter was again before the legislature in 1913, and a bill was again passed appropriating a portion of the money claimed, and it met with the veto of the governor. Gov. Cress took the position that the state neither legally nor morally was bound to pay these claims. That they were made without authority of law and that if officials of the state extended their authority and incurred debts, the state should not pay them, this contention was that a servant of the state, no matter what official position he occupies, can no more bind the taxpayers of the state when he acts beyond his authority. The present legislature again passed the coveted appropriation bill and the governor, with a song of "Great Economy" on his lips, signed the bill while the taxpayers will foot the bill.—From Editorial in the Daily Ardmoreite.

ASSEMBLY LINE NOW INVOLVED

Governor Would Put Corporation Tax on Gathering Lines of Oil Producers

DEFERRED consideration of the tentative assessment made by the state board of equalization of the pipeline owned in common by the Kalleen Oil company, the only oil company, Oil Production company, Sperry Oil company, Taxaway Oil company and the Sperry Oil and Gas company, developed a taxation question that should interest every oil producer in the state.

The tentative assessment was made against the first named company because the condition was made in the name of that company, and that the other companies were interested in the line was not known until the fact was mentioned by Edward H. Chandler, attorney appearing for the companies involved.

Mr. Chandler said that the pipeline was privately owned and used only in transporting oil from the wells of its owners in Payne and Lincoln counties to the tank farm located at the bend in the line between the counties.

Not Transporting for Hire

He said that the line was not transporting any oil for hire and was not a public carrier, and therefore not assessable as such, that the property had been rendered to the county assessors under the ad valorem rule.

When it was discovered that several companies owned the line, G. H. Williams began a very searching quiz of the attorney, asking if the valuation of interests was not resorted to as a subterfuge to avoid paying tax as a public service corporation.

It developed later that the first four companies named were owned by the White & Sinclair interests, the Taxaway by E. H. Kemp and others and the Sperry company by John Crawford and others, and that H. H. Sinclair of Tulsa was trustee-manager of the line paying taxes, appropriating salaries of employees and charges for transportation.

Affects All Producers

"If these people are assessable, every other oil producer in the state is similarly assessable," said Attorney Chandler. "Every lease has a system of gathering. The pipe lines may be a few hundred feet in length or a mile or so. Our line is about 22 miles long."

"If I was a member of the supreme court you would have a hard time convincing me that you are not amenable to taxation as a public service corporation," said the governor.

"I have no doubt of that. It is apparent to me," was Chandler's quick retort.

"It seems to me this is a question of jurisdiction," interposed State Auditor E. H. Howard.

At this the governor suggested that the board take a vote on the question as to whether it should assume jurisdiction. To this Howard objected, saying: "I might vote one way from my own judgment, whereas the law might be otherwise." To this the governor made the remarkable statement: "Whatever is law is right."

"That's where you and I differ," said Chandler.

"At what amount were you assessed by the counties?" inquired State Examiner and Inspector Fred Parkinson.

"At about $200,000," replied Chandler, adding: "Now, it is my understanding that if the assessors assess this pipeline they assess all of our property and if the board makes the assessment it makes all of it."

"We probably will take their assessment as our assessment and let it go at that," said State Treasurer W. J. Alexander, which statement Howard supplemented with: "You cannot assured we will not cause any double taxation."

"Next year," volunteered the governor, "the assessors will be on a salary basis and they will not be so anxious to get everything on the rolls."

The matter was by vote continued to November 13.

PATROLMAN LUNG HEARING BEGINS

him if he comes around the corner," Nichols said. "No, I don't want him killed. I never talked to a man nicer in my life, and I don't know why he did that way." Giddings, for Lung, then objected, and Justice McWilliams overruled the objection, saying that he wanted to hear every bit of the testimony, and that "the gates are down, and I don't care whether you talk about the Dutch war, or what, so long as we get all of this story." Lee then continued, by saying that Nichols said, "I don't want to have to kill Johnny, you go back and see that he's locked up." Lee went back to the station, and saw that a group of men had Lung, and that he was distressed, so he returned to the chief, who was in a clothing store and went with him to the hospital.

Cross-examination

E. J. Giddings then cross-examined Lee. He asked him if he had ever talked to the newspaper men about the case, and he said that he had. Lee was then asked if he knew the newspaper men in the courtroom and if he had talked to them. He stated that he had, but he talked to a News reporter that afternoon, but that the News account misquoted him and had everything wrong. Confirmed Moberg between Embury and Giddings and Lee and Giddings took up much of the time of the court at this juncture. Mr.
